If Food Could Speak

WorldFest on Saturday, 9th May

Hundreds of food products and unique handmade crafts from Fair Trade producers in small communities in Asia, Africa and Latin America, together with locally grown fruit and vegetables, some of which are organic, will be on sale during the eighth edition of WorldFest on Saturday, 9th May at Ġnien l-Indipendenza in Sliema between 10.00am and 10.00pm. Entrance to all events is free of charge.

The theme chosen for this year's WorldFest, which coincides with World Fair Trade Day, is "Kieku l-Ikel Jitkellem – The Right to Food." The events include morning and afternoon seed planting sessions and creative activities for children; two public fora with Maltese, Gozitan and speakers from Italy and Belgium; the launching of a book of new literature and essays on food by activists and experts; and a presentation on agro-fuels.

The concert that starts at 8.00pm features new Maltese literature about food by writers such as Immanuel Mifsud, Walid Nabhan, Annalise Falzon and Adrian Grima, and a reading by the established American-Irish poet Chris Agee. Live eclectic music will be played by Antoine Vella and Andrew Christie, Danjeli, and by the unlikely and irreverent folk ensemble of the moment, Brikkuni, who will be joined for the first time by Sudanese singer Mohammed Ahmed Rahmatalla.

WorldFest is organised by the volunteers of the Maltese fair trade cooperative, Koperattiva Kummerċ Ġust (KKĠ), in collaboration with other Maltese organizations that are active in favour of global justice, local agricultural sustainability and food sovereignty, and with the support of the Sliema Local Council.

This year's WorldFest deals mainly with the topical issue of food sovereignty, which is essentially about empowering both producers at a local level and in global South, and consumers everywhere. "The best way to arrive at a balanced, just and sustainable food system is to have a democratic conversation about it. The power should be in our hands, and all too often it isn't." According to Raj Patel, "the way our food comes to us has been shaped by corporations and governments, international institutions and oligarchs," and it doesn't feel like we have much of a say in the larger debate.

Activities for Children, Public Fora, Music and Food

Storytelling and crafts for children from 7-10 yrs will be held between 11.00am and 12.30pm and again from 5.00pm to 6.30pm. Children will have organic seed planting sessions by Food First Malta starting at 1.00pm and 6.00pm. Friends of the Earth

Malta will make a presentation for the general public on agrofuels, “Fuelling or Fooling Europe?” that starts at 5.00pm.

The first public forum, at 6.00pm, “If food could speak,” will be held in English and chaired by William Grech. The speakers are Riccardo Franciolini (Italy), Eric Van Monckhoven (Belgium, Italy), Prof. Carmel Cassar (Slow Food Malta), Vince Caruana (University lecturer), and Victor Galea (Ager Foundation, Gozo).

The second forum that starts at 7.00pm will be in Maltese and chaired by sociologist Anna Zammit. The speakers are Fra Ġwann Xerri OP, sociologist Angele Deguara (Koperattiva Kummerċ Ġust), Joe Galea (Koperattiva Rurali Manikata), Evarist Bartolo (PL), Carmel Cacopardo (AD), Philip Mifsud (PN) and Clement Azzopardi (Għaqda tal-Produtturi Gomriża).

Typical dishes from Malta, Palestine, Eritrea and Somalia, with Fair Trade ingredients and local fruit and vegetables, will be on sale as from 7.00pm. Nathalie Grima from KKG believes that “By choosing local produce and Fair Trade products, we believe that we can make a difference in the way global economic, environmental and trade situations are addressed.”

Collaborating organisations in Worldfest are Food First Malta, Friends of the Earth, Gaia Foundation, Għaqda tal-Produtturi Gomriża, Global Action Schools, Moviment Graffiti, Inizjamed, Manikata Farmers’ Cooperative, Slow Food Malta, The Arabic Culture Information Society and Third World Group.

WorldFest is co-funded by the Youth Action Programme and the Enlarging Fair EU project.
